E. S. JUDGE'S WRIT DEFIED.

Sheriff Refused to Accept It-Chactaw Judge Ordered Execution to Proceed. In Spite of Stay-Spot Painted For Target-Slow Death After the Shot.

GOODLANDS, I. T., July 14.—William Goings, "Walla Tonk," the Choctaw Indian, was shot at Alikchi, I. T., under sentence of the Choctaw court, for murder.

Application was made to Federal Judge John R. Thomas for a writ of habeas corpus. An order by Judge Thomas granting the writ was telegraphed from Tulsa, I. T. District Attorney Clay and Sheriff Thomas Watin consultation when it was presented.

The sheriff refused to receive it. The district attorney declared that "Judge Abner James, the Choctaw judge, alone could stop the execution."

A runner was dispatched to Judge James, notifying him of the telegram from Judge Thomas. He sent a verbal message to go ahead with the execution. It occurred a few hours later. A few minutes before Goings was, led out four Choctaws appeared bearing a coffin. It was deposited in front of the court-house. Near it a quilt was spread. The condemned Indian, supported by Sheriff Watson and a deputy and escorted by 20 light horsemen, marched down the line of spectators. Goings then knelt on the quilt blindfolded. The sheriff bared his bosom, painted a spot over his heart, stepped back four paces, rested a rifle across a back four paces, rested a rifle across a bench and tired. The bullet entered the breast but missed the spot. Goings through the press. Senator Chandler fell backward and moaned for about an was invited to be present by Mr. hour before expiring. There has been a custom in the Choctaw tribe for years as follows: When an Indian is convicted of murder he is set free after the judge has fixed the day when he shall be shot. No bond is required. The Indian gives his word that he will appear to be shot.

He went to Cuba when the war was declared and settled in the interior. taking up with Cuban soldiers. Lately he proposed to and married a pretty Cuban senorita and settled down. Several months ago Judge Clayton refused further clemency and remanded his case back to the Indian courts. The execution day was set and Goings was informed by letter. Then he bade his wife goodby, and started toward the Choctaw nation. He did not tell his wife why he left her when he came

The bishop was in London when the thrilling news of Dewey's victory came. It was universally understood there, he said, that it meant the permanent pos sion of the Philippines by the United States. Dewey had not coal enough to carry him to the nearest American coaling station, and he was bound to take Manila in self-defense. Washington, July 14.—The pension committee of the G. A. R. finished its inquiry here and most of the members left the city. The committee called at the White ows employed in the office were called ogether to meet the committee, before whom they passed in line and exchanged friendly salutations. A final meeting of the committee was held in the hetel quarters, when individual views and recommendations were presented and an informal consultation held as to the nature of the report to be made.

The examination of the files had shown a lack of foundation for many complaints that had formed the basis of criticism.

It was learned before the committee's departure that when it arrived here it had a memorandum of about 30 cases in which the rulings had been criticised. The papers in these cases were sent for in regular order and it is understood New York, sent out a bit of information disclosed substantially no foundation for the attacks on the official action on

Taught a Beautiful

To an ancient, pious Brahman was a grandson born. Full of joy at the bless ing which had again happened to his house, he said: "I will go out hence ava-ture, who has blessed us. Perhaps he may give me opportunity to honor him, even through one good deed."

So spoke the Brahman and went. The blossom of pure joy is gratitude and its fruit benevolence

thank the great spirit and father of na

With the lively feeling of honoring the great and beneficent spirit, the old man stepped into the fields, and, in the shade eld in Turner hall and resolutions of the trees, each of his thoughts was a prayer. Still sparkled the drops of a freshly fallen shower on stalks, blossoms and leaves,

Although he had already seen the spring 90 times, nature seemed to him ugain made vonne and fairer than ever for she grows not old to him who re veres her creator and recognizes in the figure the benevolent sculptor. The old man set on his way forward, and on the beaten path he found an acorn. The rain had already, through its fertilizing power, sent the germ forth, and the shell burst asunder, but it could not take root on the hard, bare path. He stooped, took it up and said: "How charming it is to be brought thus far on my way, for easily hadst thou been trodden in pieces by the foot of the wanderer or withered by the solar rays. Happy shall I be if I can here do a good work and, by deed, fulfill my inward sentiment and the aim of wise nature advance, who with each breath shows a as a growing evil. So in his annual reenefit-even the smallest thankfulness is a sweet duty." A youngster who stood behind the oak tree and who had caught up the words of the Brahman stepped forward and jeeringly smiled. "Why smilest thou?" asked the old

The youngster answered, "At thy childish thought, my elder, that thou canst rejoice at having rescued the life of an acorn."

"Youngster." said the Brahman, "how art thou able to know my thoughts, since today is the first time thou hast seen me? And why dost thou jeer at the small service which I intend to perform to nature? To her is the acorn worth as much as the tree, and without that this were not. Even virtue, my son, begins with tee's spokesman, and his colleagues de-clined absolutely to discuss their work clines to humility and simplicity, and then to her is worth the smallest as much as the highest. Sends not Brahma, too, his ray and dew on the blade of grass as well as on the palm tree?"

Thus spoke the old man with friendly seriousness. The youngster silently with-drew himself, full of veneration. He had seen the noble old man in his dignity, and he wished to be like him, for frivolity itself must in its heart revere virtue. The Brahman set forward on his way to a hill which was overgrown round about with thorns. He met a peddler, who asked: "Thinkest thou that out of an acorp thou canst rear a tree for thyself? Thou wilt indeed scarcely have the joy of its called out a herdsman opposite to him. "Thou carest badly for thy nursling." "Friend," replied the Brahman, "so long as the little plant is tender and small the thorns will shelter it from raw winds and injury, and when it grows up it will work a way through for itself, for it is an oak. My son, I have obtained this of nature. The good mother considers equally the tenderness and strength of her foster children." After the old man had completed his work he trod gayly on the way back to his homestead. As he drew near to his hut his grandsons and great-grandsons sprang toward him and asked, "Where hast thou been so long?" But he assembled them around him and recounted all which had happened to him, and the little children caressed the old man while he spoke. The elder ones, however, hung on his lips and harkened to "Oh," said the old man when he had finished, "there is certainly no place fairer than in the lap of nature, when the father loves his offspring and in the quiet circle of his family is beloved by his chilcried he, and glanced upward to heaven, "in the quiet circle of nature and of do mestic peace stands thy holy temple!" The new planted oak soon grew forth out of the germ and raised itself up above the thorns and became a spreading shady tree. There died the old man, and whenever they saw the tree and heard its rustlings they were mindful of the life and wise sayings of the Brahman, even to

SO AT LEAST THINKS CHIEF DEVERY OF NEW YORK.

And, With an Eve to the Usefulness of the Force, He Makes a Suggestion Which Causes the Corpulent Members to Stagger.

It came as a great light to Chief Devery after he had been promoted to a thinking part in the conduct of his department that a fat policeman was an offense to the aesthetic eye and a bad proposition as regards economy and utility. Resting his chin in his hand he gazed into the future and saw the time when only five bluecoats could sleep in a dormitory now accommodating tifteen, and when it would be necessary to equip them with pneumatic fires and let them roll after the agile thief.

Appalled by the vision, he conferred with Mayor Van Wyck, and many of the finest who proudly marched before the reviewing stand on June 1, with their chest development all below the waist line, served to confirm the dread which had been communicated to the municipal executive. He noted with dismay that the interval between the

"ONE MORE PULL THERE, BILL." ranks prescribed by tactics had been increased in order that the belt plates of the men in the rear should not cut holes in the summer uniforms of the men in front.

It was determined to start a crusade against, fat, and it was decided that the first thing to do was to find the cause of police obesity and then hunt around for the remedy. It is reported that when the subject was broached at a meeting of the police board Commissioners Hess and Sexton at first gazed at Chief Devery reproachfully and finally smiled with an air of indulgence at the suggestions made by Commissioners York and Abell. At last Chief Devery evolved a theory that suited him and decided officially to direct attention to what was literally described port he embodied this mild comment: "Experience has shown that the conditions of life under which police live in the station houses, with irregular hours for sleep, meals, etc., has a tendency to make many of them grow fat. In the case of many policemen this condition is a serious hindrance to the proper performance of police service. The better the physical condition of the men the better service will they render to the public. The athlete trains for the various feats in which he takes part, and the best trained almost invariably wins. The policeman is liable to be called upon at a moment's notice for the performance of duty requiring strength and agility, and his physical the little and from this mounts upward | condition should be such as to make to the great, but the nearer she ap- him always ready to cope with any

With a view to correcting this tendency to corpnlency and to put the members of the force in such condition that they could successfully accomplish what they might be called upon to do, I would suggest to your honorable board the consideration of some system of physical training for the force which could be carried on at regular intervals during reserve hours in station houses and which could be so arranged as not to interfere with the work or rest of the men."

This body blow, so to speak, filled the fat fellows with fear. Comfortable old belts that had been draped in the curve of beauty around their owners were yanked over so many holes that the stitching gave. There were melancholy assume a gazelle-like grace and sprightly mien. The slim policemen had what they called fun, even posting such no-

HEREP' tices on fat men's pillows as, "Bill the Barrel Gets Into His Pants With a Shoe Horn," and "Carpet Stretchers Must Not Be Used on Uniform Coats." All this increased the mental anguish of the ponderous ones. They are taking hot baths and joining gymnasiums and some have gone so far as to refrain from eating peanuts, on the ground that they put on tissue. The gentlemen who wear gold earrings and conduct corner stands are planning a testimonial of gratitude to Chief Devery. The next move in Mulberry street is awaited with fearsome interest, and corpulent ones are preparing to use corsets to improve their figures for the next inspection .- New York Herald.
